Building

Responsibility and Accountability for Gender-Based Violence Elimination (BRAVE)

GENDER-BASED VIOLENCE (GBV) IN VIETNAM: More than half of Vietnamese women reported experiencing at least one type of physical, sexual and/or emotional violence in their lifetime. However, it is likely that rates of GBV are significantly under-reported. Victim blaming, together with social and cultural norms, makes it particularly difficult to survivors to speak up and advocate for their rights. As a result, harmful gender stereotypes about women's and men's roles, social expectations that encourage silence from victims, and a culture of GBV that normalises perpetrators' violence continue to prevail.

Through BRAVE, CARE works to increase the rejection of GBV among the Vietnamese public by shifting the responsibility for GBV away from the survivor.

KEY OUTCOMES

The public recognises the injustice of GBV, the rights of GBV survivors, and the accountability of perpetrators and duty bearers in ending GBV.

GBV survivors are active agents of change to break the taboo around GBV

Participants

Survivors of GBV, journalists and the public

Locations

Hanoi and nationwide

Co-implementing Partners

Centre for Studies and Applied Sciences in Gender, Families, Women and Adolescents (CSAGA)

Institute for Studies of Society, Economics and Environment (iSEE)

Timeframe, budget and donor May 2018 - April 2020 600,000 AUD The Australian Government

11,000+

people to be reached directly

2 mil+

people benefiting indirectly through media campaign

BRAVE network

is formed

SURVIVORS

speak out against GBV

HOW WILL THE PROJECT WORK?

Shifting away from victim blaming is one component of a complex and multi-faceted response to GBV. The project will run an engaging public campaign that focuses on the voice of survivors and the call to change behaviours that justify, condone, or ignore GBV as well as to promote peer support among survivors. The campaign will:

Engage the media and public through positive messages to shift away from victim blaming and move towards recognising the responsibility of the perpetrator;

Form a 'BRAVE network' of survivor leaders and their community-based organisations;

Provide training and networking opportunities for 'BRAVE network' to equip them with the skills, knowledge, and confidence to speak out against GBV and victim-blaming and to support their peers.